

Name: Kevin Chau
Student ID number: 23816929
Login ID: cs70-zh
Email address: kevinchau321@berkeley.edu;

Who is your primary GSI (i.e. the person who should assign your participation grade)?
Sara Sheehan is my primary GSI. I'm enrolled on tele bears in Claire's sections but I only go to Sara's section.

Are there other GSIs with whom you've interacted frequently? Your primary GSI may consult them for help in assigning your grade.

Primarily just Sara during her discussions. I might have asked some of the GSIs questions during homework parties/ reviews, but I didn't frequent any other GSI's discussion.

Please fill out the following sections as accurately and honestly as you can. Remember: it is not necessary to have participated in all of these ways, e.g. someone who posts a lot on Piazza but does nothing else may still earn full participation points. Please give us as much information as possible so we can give you the grade you deserve.

Lecture: did you attend often/always? Did you ask relevant questions? Give up to two examples. I attended lecture all but 2 times this semester (I had evening exams those days). I didn't ask very many questions in lecture because I preferred to ask questions in discussions and homework parties. Occasionally I would shout out when Sahai needed to move the paper under the document camera so that it would fit better on the projector screen.

Discussion section: did you attend often/always? Did you ask relevant questions? Give up to two examples.

I think discussions were where I tried to focus my participation effort out of all the categories here. I felt very comfortable asking questions to other students while working on problems in small groups, but I also asked Sara a lot of questions while going over problems as a whole class. Often times when I had an alternate way of solving a problem but got the same answer as everyone else, I would ask Sara how the different approaches compare and which one is more appropriate to use.

Office hours/homework party: did you attend often? What did you do while you were there? Did you work alone or with others? Give any memorable examples.

I attended a few homework parties this semester. While I was there I tried to work with people I hadn't met before, but I also worked with a few of the same people as well a couple of times. Not too many memorable times; most homework parties were fairly straight forward for me and I didn't go to any more than a handful.

Piazza: how often do you post? Were you asking questions or answering them (both are good!)? Did you post course-related content/links? Please tell us about your posts that you think were your greatest contribution (e.g. top 5; screenshots with URL are best).

I checked the cs70 piazza almost everyday this semester. My class statistics on piazza says I have 16 contributions (posts, responses, etc.) and 389 posts viewed. I would estimate that I had a pretty average piazza participation. I mostly used piazza to ask questions about the homework questions in addition to at homework parties, and ask followups, but I didn't submit any extra credit piazza posts such as discussion solutions or last homework problem write ups.

Work with others outside of class: if you had any outstanding experiences with other students (e.g. organized your own mini-HW party), please mention them here.

I often worked in Martinez commons on Sunday nights with a group of cs70 students varying from 3-8 people. On Facebook, I also joined a cs70 spring 2014 student group where we ask questions about homework and keep each other updated about class announcements, deadlines, exam review, etc.

Other: if there's anything we missed with the above questions, please mention it here.

I tried to be very active with participation across all categories in cs70, as I think the most helpful way for me to understand the 70 concepts are through interacting with others and talking out concepts and problems before writing out solutions. Overall, most of my participation happened in discussion, as discussions were the easiest for me to go to on a weekly basis (I couldn't go to all the homework parties but I was consistent in my discussion attendance).